

Celebrating 50 years of computing at the Rutherford Appleton Laboratory: Exhibit photos

Frame from "Alien," 1979

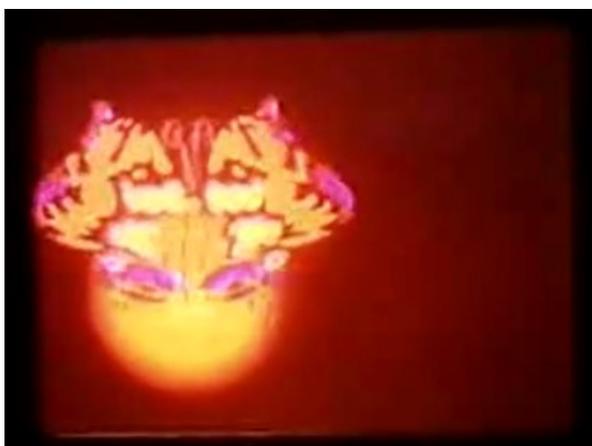

Sylvester Squirrel, one of the first Antics character animations, 1973

Still from "Finite Elements" showing tides in the Solent, 1975

Still from "Tomorrow's World": Graham England, Stan Hayward and Bob Hopgood watching the output coming off the SC4020 printer, 1971

Still from "Tomorrow's World," 1971

Presentation of the Great Wall of China embroidery , 1983

National networking facilities, 1976

Always a good sport: Jack Howlett ready for retirement, dressed as Julius Caesar courtesy of Data Prep

Geoff Lambert at the console of the IBM 360/75, the forerunner of the 360/195

45737 Atlas at Scotforth, 17 August 1961 (photo by Noel A. Machell, courtesy of Mark A. Hoofe)

Jack Howlett and Brian Davies (Head of Computing Division at Rutherford Laboratory) next to the Atlas console in the Atlas Reception Area; above is the locomotive nameplate and photograph

IBM card punch

Brownies visit the Cray, 1992

Trev Amos and the newly-delivered Cray J90, tea-time 1996

IBM 3494 tape library data server, 1994

Eileen Perkins loads one of Ampex magnetic tapes in the Atlas Operations Room; in the foreground is a teletype printer and a CCTV image of the Engineer's console downstairs, 1968

